

Location
Cheyenne, WyomingHeadcount
5,970Focus
Academic, career/technical and community education

CHALLENGE

LCCC committed to being an American Association of Community Colleges Pathways Institute. LCCC had no means of letting students compare and explore Pathways and the website had almost no connection with job prospects or earning potentials. The students would get contradicting career information from school counselors, family, friends, and LCCC staff.

SOLUTION

Emsi Career Coach has acted as the one-stop location for anything career-related at LCCC. Students take the assessment as the first step in the application process, students research job prospects in the Freshman Seminar, and soon-to-be graduates create resumes to be reviewed. Internally, LCCC programs have relied on Emsi data to make data-driven decisions about the college's offerings.

RESULT

The largest school district in the state, Laramie County School district chose to use Career Coach assessments in High School career exploration curriculum. This adoption has allowed Laramie County secondary students to explore career options and choose an LCCC Pathways as soon as 8th grade, and through graduation.

As told by Adam Keizer,
Career Services Coordinator

“Emsi provides forward-thinking policy paired with technology and data that helps institutions advance their goals.”

FROM THE PRESIDENT

“Emsi has a long history and relationship with Wyoming. Having conducted economic impact and program/demand gap analyses for the state and its community colleges, we knew they had the pulse on the region we serve. More than that relationship, Emsi provides forward-thinking policy paired with technology and data that helps institutions advance their goals. For us, that was helping push purposeful career exploration early in a student's educational journey and linking career interest with real opportunities backed by labor market data. Emsi provided the entire package.”

— Dr. Joe Schaffer, President

CAREER COACH

This powerful online service uses Emsi's comprehensive labor market data to help students find careers that match their strengths—and discover programs at your college that will prepare them for success.